paid out for this season's sales $1, 923,916.47, being an average of $11.25.
Last season's average was $8. There has been no better market in the here next season.

VILLA TRAPPED

Wireless Dispatches From the Front
Say Bandit Chief Hemmed
In By Rapid Advance.

El Paso, Texas, March 20.—Francisco Villa has been driven into trap by the rapid advance of the American troops, according to the information received yesterday in wireless dispatches from the front and in telegraphic dispatches to General Garbriel Gavira, the Carranza commander at Juarez.

Everything seems now to depend on the ability of the Carranza garrisons to hold their end of the net. On three sides of the bandit chief he is hemmed in by strong Carranza columns, while on the fourth the Americans are driving forward with amazing speed.

Villa was reported in the Babicora lake region last night on the ranch of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, which he has ravaged several times in the past.
Babicora is about fifty-five miles south of Guadalupe, where one section of the American expeditionary force has arrived and is pushing forward.

The whole situation seems to hang on the Carranza forces. If they remain loyal to the first chief, which up to the present they have shown every indication of doing, Villa appears to be trapped.

DIED AT COVINGTON.

Mrs. Sarah E. Prizer died at her home in Covington Sunday afternoon, at the age of 65 years, after an illness of several months. She is survived by three children, Mrs. C. H. Black of this city; Mrs. George Murray and Mr.
Don M. Prizer, both of New York City.
The funeral will be held in Covington Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Black left for Covington Monday morning.

Mr. Buckner W. Goodman, one of the most popular men in this city, was adjudged insane in Judge Rice's court Saturday and taken to the Lexington State Hospital. It is the hope of his numerous friends that his derangement is only temporary and that he will soon be restored to his usual good health and genial disposition.

Contractor James E. Dawson has broken ground for the foundation for the handsome seven-room bungalow to be built for Mr. Charles Bland. The timbering will be one of the most modern in Maysville and will add much to the beauty of West Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Elliott of the county, Monday morning shipped their household goods to Trenton, O., where
Mr. Elliott has purchased a store.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Elliott are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Holling of East Second street.

BAD WRECK

Coal Train Piled Up Twenty Cars At Springdale On the C. & O.
Saturday Morning.

Westbound coal train No. 907, while coming through Springdale Saturday morning broke all records for wrecks
since the memorable disaster at Hull Creek a number of years ago.

A drawbar on one of the cars about six back of the engine pulled out and dropped down, and of course fell just where it would be the means of doing the most damage.

In consequence twenty earloads of coal piled up on ends, sidings, crossings and every other way, tearing up the track and playing smash in general, completely blocking traffic.

Train No. 2, eastbound, and train
No. 3, westbound, were detained over the Norfolk and Western out of and into Cincinnati, and the accommodation trains transferred around the pile-up.

With the combined efforts of two wrecking crews and a regular army of section men, the coal was cleared in about eight hours and both tracks were relaid and traffic resumed.

It was a costly stunt for the road, and the only redeeming feature was that no one was injured.

WAS THERE EVER SUCH A MESS?

In this enlightened age, and in a state as old as Kentucky, one would expect that the representatives of the people, assembled as a lawmaking body, would assume a certain sort of respectability, even though conscious of a lack of it, and make an effort to inject a little dignity into their deliberations.

As it was, with numerous measures of extreme importance on the calendar, ready to be enacted into law, and with ample time to put them through the legislative routine, the members of the House of Representatives conducted themselves like children, permitted bystanders to interfere with proceedings and dispersed in disorder almost equalling the rowdiness of two days before.

It is vain to hope for much improvement in the personnel of the General Assembly.

Year after year, with here and there a notable exception, not absolutely until from every standpoint for the duties which rightfully rest upon them, are chosen to represent splendid constituencies, and if they accomplish anything worth while during their legislative term, it is due to the active and persistent watchfulness of some man or some interest which is seeking a particular end or object.

One thing, however, is very plain. It will not be possible for any session of the Kentucky Legislature to consider any public question sanely and impartially so long as the liquor problem is uppermost in the minds of the people and the distillers and the brewers remain brutally indifferent to the demands for better regulation of their traffic.

At this session of the General Assembly, with the single exception of the Sunday closing law, every method known to the corporations was employed to obstruct temperance legislation. No public objection was too sacred to be respected by the liquor lobby and no man was above attack if he was suspected of being untrue to the whiskey cause.

This state of affairs can not endure forever. If the Republican and the Democratic parties, as parties, do not give evidence of determination to forever free themselves from the evil influences of the unscrupulous lobbyists who really control legislation in this state, the people will find means of settling these questions outside of the parties.

One of the measures which was overlooked in the confusion of the closing hours of the session was the redistricting bill and again in the election two years hence for members of the General Assembly, thousands of the voters of Kentucky will be practically disfranchised.

It was charged weeks ago by Democratic newspapers that the expressed purpose to pass a redistricting bill at this session of the Legislature was simply a movement to make the next General Assembly wet beyond all doubt.

That the suggestion first came from Democratic sources was sufficient in itself to arouse suspicion as to its honesty, because the average machine politician, in either party, is not disposed to surrender a political advantage unless he has concealed a compensating clause somewhere.

It looks now as if this offer or promise to give a just apportionment in Republican sections of the state was part of the general purpose to court the friendly co-operation of the minority Senators and Representatives in passing certain bills, or defeating particular propositions, and then let the Republicans get their redistricting bill through as best they could.

Some of the Republicans who at critical points lined up with "the administration" can now appreciate the situation without the use of a diagram.—Lexington Leader.

Warm applause is being given to those generous corporations that are raising wages, and then paying for the advance twice over by increased prices to the consumer.

It will be a most unpopular stand, but this newspaper is unalterably opposed to pensions for the members of the Ford peace party.

News from the southern resorts tell us how the tired and worn out people are taking the rest cure by dancing until 1 a. m.

THE body design of this new Overland carries out the latest streamline design. The equipment compares with that of cars very much higher in price. At the same time it is a low priced car that costs very little to run. It is equipped with the Autolite two-unit starting and lighting system. Its rear springs are the famous cantilever type, probably the easiest riding springs ever designed. It has four-inch tires all around; non-skids on rear. Demountable rims are used and one extra rim is included. There is a magnetic speedometer and a full set of tools. It is not only a thoroughly high grade car, but carries with it a completeness of equipment unheard of in cars of this price.

Stingaree

BY E. W. HORNUNG.

A DUEL IN THE DESERT.

It was 5 o'clock and Monday morning when the romantic rascals were led away in unromantic bonds. Their arms were bound to their bodies, their feet lashed to the stirrup leathers. They sat like packs upon quiet station horses carefully chosen for the nonce. They were tethered to a mounted policeman apiece, each with leading rein hooked to his left wrist and government revolver in his right hand. Behind the quartet rode the officer in command, superbly mounted, watching over all four with a third revolver ready cocked. It seemed a small and yet an ample escort for the two bound men.

But Stingaree was by no means in that state of Napoleonic despair which his bent back and lowering countenance were intended to convey. He had not uttered a word since the arrival of the police, whom he had suffered to lift him on horseback, as he now sat, without raising his morose eyes once. Howle, on the other hand, had offered a good deal of futile opposition, cursing his captors as the fit moved him and once struggling so in vainly in his bonds as to earn a tap from the wrong end of a revolver and a bloody face for his pains. Stingaree glowered in deep delight. His mate's part was as well acted as his own, but it was he who had conceived them both and expounded them in countless camps against some such extremity as this. The result was in ideal accordance with his calculations. The man who gave the trouble was the man to watch. And Stingaree, chin on chest, was left in peace to evolve a way of escape.

The chances were all adverse; he had never been less sanguine in his life. Not that Stingaree had much opinion of the police—he had slipped through their hands too often—but it was an unfortunate circumstance that two of the present trio were among those whom he had eluded most recently and who therefore would be least likely to give him another chance. A lightning student of his kind, he based his only hope upon an accurate estimate of these men and applied his whole mind to the triple task. But it was a single task almost from the first, for the policeman in charge of him was none other than his credulous old friend, Sergeant Cameron from Glen Corner, and Howle's custodian, a young trooper run from the same mold as Constable Tyler and many a hundred more, in whom a thick skull concealed a stout heart. Both were brave men; neither was really to be feared. But the man behind upon the thoroughbred, the man in front, the man now on this side and now on that, with his braying laugh and his vindictive voice—triumphant as though he had taken the lustrous riders himself and a blatant bully in his triumph—was none other than the formidable superintendent whose undying animosity the bushrangers had earned by the two escapades associated with his name.

Yet the outlaw never flattered him with word or look, never lifted chin from chest, never raised an eye or opened his mouth until Howle's knock on the head caused him to curse his mate for a fool who deserved all he got. The thoroughbred was carcassing on his other side in an instant.

"You ain't one, are you?" cried the laughing tongue of Superintendent Cairns. "Not much foot about Stingaree."

"The time had come for a reply."

"So I thought until yesterday."

"The lustrous rider." "But now I'm not so sure."

"Not so sure, eh? You were sure enough the last time we met, my beauty."

"Yes, I had some conceit of myself then," said Stingaree, with another of his convincing sighs.

"To say nothing of when you guyed me, blast you!" added the superintendent below his breath and through his teeth.

"Well," replied the outlaw, "you've got your revenge. I must expect you to run it in."

"My friend," rejoined Cairns, "you may expect worse than that, and still you won't be disappointed."

By degrees Stingaree raised his chin a little, but still looked neither right nor left.

"Cheer up!" cried the chief, with soothing irony.

"I feel the heat," said the bound man uncomplainingly. "And it was just about here it happened."

"What happened?"

"We overtook the church militia here upon earth," rejoined the bushranger, with useful irreverence.

"Well, you ran against a snag then, Mr. Sanguinary Stingaree?"

"I couldn't resist turning Howle into the bushes and making myself his mouthpiece. I haven't let him open his lips. It wasn't the opportunity that was worth having; it was the fun of round-up that congregation on the home-stand veranda and never letting them spot a thing till we showed our guns. There hadn't been a blitch, and there never would have been if that old blabber hadn't run all those miles barefoot over hot sand and taken us unaware."

Made with a very humor and a philosophic candor, these remarks seemed natural enough to one knowing little of Stingaree. They seemed just the sort of things that Stingaree would say. The effect, however, was rather to glorify Bishop Methuen at the expense of Superintendent Cairns, who strove to reverse it with some dexterity.

"You certainly ran against a snag," he repeated, "and now your mate's run against another." He gave the butt of his ready pistol a significant tap. "But I'm the worst snag that ever either of you struck," he went on in his vainglory. "Make no mistake about that. And the worst day's work that ever you did in your life, Mr. Sanguinary Stingaree, was when you dared play at being a male cooked Cairns."

Stingaree took a first good look at his mate. After all he was not so crooked as he had seemed on foot. He was a fine fellow, too, with a dump was even less pronounced than Stingaree himself had made it on Howle. It looked more like a ridge of extra muscles across a pair of abnormally broad and powerful shoulders. There was the absence of neck which this deformity suggests; there was a great head lighted by flashing and indignant eyes, but mounted only on its mighty chin.

"The most poetic justice!" murmured Stingaree, and resumed in an instant his apathetic pose.

"It serves you jolly well right, if that's what you mean," the superintendent snarled. "You've yourself and your own mighty cheek to thank for taking me out of my shell and putting me on your tracks in earnest. But it was high time they knew the cut of my jib up here; the fools won't forget me again in a hurry. And you, you devil, shouldn't forget me till your dying day!"

On Stingaree's off side Sergeant Cameron was also hanging an insulted head. But the bushranger laughed softly at his chest.

"Some one has got to do your dirty work," said he. "I did it that time, and the bishop has done it now, but you shouldn't blame me for helping your fellows to bring a murderer to justice."

"You guyed me," said Cairns through his teeth. "I heard all about it. You guyed me, blast your soul!"

Stingaree felt that he was missing a strong face finely convulsed with passion as indeed he was. But he had already committed the indiscretion of a repartee which was scarcely consistent with an attitude of extreme despair. A downcast silence seemed the safest policy after all.

"It need to be forty miles to the Corner," he murmured, after a time. "We can't have come more than ten."

"Not so much," snapped the superintendent.

"Going to stop for a feed at Ma-zappa station?"

"That's my business."

"It's a long day for three of you, in this heat, with two of us."

"The time won't hang heavy on our hands."

"Not heavy enough, I should have thought. I wonder you didn't bring some of the boys from Mulvera along with you."

Superintendent Cairns brayed his high, harsh laugh.

"Yes, you wonder, and so did they," said he. "But I know a bit too much."

"You're too suspicious," said Stingaree mildly. "But I was thinking of the bishop and the boys."

"They've gone their own way," growled Cairns, "and it's just as well it wasn't our way. I'd have stood no interference from them."

They Reined Up, Made Him Dismount and Lashed Him Tighter.

That had been his attitude on the station. Stingaree had heard of his rudeness to those to whom the whole credit of the capture belonged. The man revealed his character as freely as an angry child.

The party pushed on for another hour. The heat was terrible. The bound men endured torments in their bonds. But the nature of the superintendent, deformed, like his body, declared itself duly at every turn, and the more one prisoner groaned and the other blasphemed the greater the zest and obscurity of the driving force behind him.

AT END OF STRING

Mr. Groundhog Has Run Out of His Six Weeks' Retirement, But Seems To Be Still On the Job.

The groundhog has had his lining. Wednesday was the last day that "prognosticator" could hold the indicator on the weather conditions and has moved out to allow some one else to get on the weather job and say what we are to have.

However, he took advantage of the last day of grace and dished out an assortment of stuff entitled "weather," that made his February work insignificant, beginning on Tuesday with balmy breezes and cute little spring zephyrs that by midnight had turned into blizzards from the north-west, accompanied by one of the heaviest snows of the winter, and on Thursday morning, just to make things good for him as a sure-enough weather hoarder, he gave us a run toward zero.

And now it is to be hoped that the dig-busted old critter will never find that hole again and that we will have something that has the resemblance of weather.

To cool the air far under ground and thereby permit the miners to longer shifts, the owners of a German coal mine compress air at the surface of the ground and pipe it through the workings.

WEAK KIDNEYS MAKE WEAK BODIES

Kidney Diseases Cause Many Aches and Pains of Maysville People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so may weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking-down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys and generally when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills frequently come, and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards dropsy, gravel or fatal Bright's disease. When the kidneys fail there is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. Maysville testimony in proof of their effectiveness.

DANISH WEST INDIES

Likely To Be Taken Over By the United States—Danish Government Willing To Sell.

Washington, D. C.—The Danish West Indies are likely to become American possessions in the immediate future, according to those who have watched the course of events leading up to the recent announcement from Copenhagen, suggesting the willingness of the Danish government to sell the islands. Several times in the past there have been movements to acquire these islands, but the negotiations fell through, for various reasons. There is a new importance attached to the little islands since the digging of the Panama Canal, for their possession by an aggressive enemy might threaten the safety of the canal in time of war.

The three islands involved in the offer of Denmark are St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John. They have an area of about 138 square miles, and a population of 33,000, mostly negroes. Raising of sugarcane is the only industry of these islands.

Frequent reports have been made of the use of the harbors of these islands by German commerce destroyers at the outset of the European war. It was said at that time that Denmark was powerless to protect the neutrality of the islands, but the fact of their use, if clearly established, gives a clear lesson to the United States as to the value of these little corners of the Caribbean to nation owning the Panama Canal and upholding the Monroe Doctrine.

If not the sole, at least the most vital reason suggesting the purchase of these islands by the United States, is their strategic importance and the likelihood of their control passing into the hands of some European power whose ownership would constitute a menace to the military interests of the United States.

There is very good circumstantial evidence, it is said here, to support the report that Germany looks forward to ownership of the Danish West Indies. In the past, when the United States sought to buy them, it was German influence in Copenhagen which intervened to prevent the sale. That was only six years ago, in 1910. Some ten years before that time, there was a movement to buy the islands for four millions of dollars, but the project fell through in Congress.

Congress awoke to the situation in 1910, and the United States again revived the question of purchase. At first the Danes manifested a willingness to sell the islands, but of a sudden, and for reasons never made fully clear, this offer of sale was withdrawn by Denmark, and she remained absolutely indifferent to further suggestions of purchase. It was in this section attempt at purchase that the German influence was exhibited, it is said.

That Denmark has now voluntarily brought forward suggestions of a sale is believed to indicate that the Danes think the present moment a favorable one to disregard the injunctions of Berlin. The hope is expressed in diplomatic circles here that Congress will prove liberal enough to grant the comparatively small appropriation needed for the purchase, about five millions.

It has never been doubted here but that Denmark would be glad to part with these possessions of hers for a reasonable sum at any time. As the Copenhagen reports say, industrial and social conditions in the islands are not favorable. The Danes lack the naval power to maintain effective control, 3,000 miles away from the home government, and her facilities for proper administration and development are equally limited. Recent strikes among the plantation laborers have served to make matters worse. But under American control conditions could be materially changed for the better.

Men take lots of things in home life for granted. Let him do this as long as it keeps him quiet.

Every woman owes to society what is due to society.

W. H. M.

Expresses His Opinion Regarding the Mexican Situation.

Editor Public Ledger:

Not since the Spanish-American war have the great daily papers of the larger cities been so crowded with sensational news. The invasion of New Mexico by Villa and his army of assassins and the murderous outrages committed at Columbus and other places has aroused the people as they have not been aroused since the blowing up of the Maine in Havana harbor.

However, aside from this honest and just indignation, there is a certain element whose views and opinions are largely aired through certain papers in which every line and every column breathe forth a note of rejoicing that we at last have a laudable excuse for the invasion of Mexico.

From our own humble viewpoint we must say if ever a people had just cause to arm themselves and invade a foreign country in defense of their rights, their honor and their homes, the American people in this case have that right. The repeated outrages of Mexico upon the peaceful American citizens along the border have become unbearable; the destruction of their property, their homes and their lives, the cold blooded murder of their wives and little innocent children, has changed from civil war in Mexico to piracy and murder upon a neutral nation.

The trouble and border warfare we are experiencing today with Mexico should be a lesson, not only to the United States, but to other nations as well. The betrayal of the poor or working class by the unscrupulous politicians of Mexico is the cause of the unhappy conditions that exist there today, and to a large extent is also the cause of the trouble, the loss of life and property of our peaceful citizens along the border states of our own country. The lack of education of the poorer classes of Mexicans is also responsible for at least some of the lawlessness that has for years cursed this unhappy people; few of the poorer class can either read or write, 80 per cent of the population can not speak a word of English, and those who can speak English refuse to do so, only as necessity requires them.

However, chief of all their troubles is the dishonest politician. Under the reign of Diaz the people of Mexico thought for a time they had a republican form of government, but they were not long in learning that under this free government there was but one man in all Mexico they could vote for in a presidential election. When Diaz could not be elected by the popular ballot he was elected by the popular bullet. For years this old thief and fraud had himself elected president of what was called a free government, at the point of the bayonet. In the meantime he carried on a systematic scheme of robbery that impoverished the nation, millions of acres of land passed from the hands of the people to the soul-less corporation, the greedy man of monopoly was fast growing plottish, with the stolen lands and rich resources of a people whose wealth is incalculable. The banks of New York at one shipment received ten million dollars to be placed to the credit of this old sinner, every dollar of which was coined from the sweat and blood, the groans and tears of the poor class. Then other unscrupulous politicians rose up and started a revolution. They told the poorer class how they were being defrauded out of their birthright, their natural inheritance, and Diaz was dethroned.

Then came a succession of these unscrupulous politicians to the throne, Madero, Huerta and last Carranza. Some attained the coveted throne by force of arms, others by murder and assassination. Yet in all this war of blood and hell, of starvation and tears, the poorer class of Mexicans has had no true and loyal friend. The government of Carranza has been recognized by the United States, and Carranza has proved a failure. He promised to restore order and to restore the stolen lands to the people, but capital with its powerful, silent, stealthy arm, says to Carranza, "We bought this stolen property and we have financed too many schemes for you and your predecessors to give up this stolen property."

That many of our American capitalists are largely interested in this dishonest plundering of Mexico is a well known fact, and from these practical capitalists has come an incessant cry for intervention. The final crisis has come.

Carranza either could not or would not restore to them their rights. In their poverty, in want and distress they turn again to Villa and Villa, living up to his traditional Indian nature, sees in these returning, disappointed, ignorant and half-starved peons, a chance to revenge himself on the United States for recognizing the Carranza government, and at the same time to gratify his incurable propensity for banditism.

One who has closely followed the events of Mexico can not help feeling a sincere sorrow for the poorer class of this war cursed country, but no difference what our sympathy may be for them, the law of self preservation must come first. Their sense of discrimination is blinded by ignorance and by the influence of their leaders who would tell them as the potter does the clay, in self defense we must kill them or be killed. Their wrath falls upon any American, regardless of whether he ever sustained a wrong at the hand of the inoffending American or not. He argues that American capitalists have absorbed his land, have taken from him without remuneration that which is rightfully his, therefore all Americans are his enemy.

That necessity compels the invasion of Mexico no one can for a moment doubt. These destroyers of our peace and happiness, of our lives and homes must be destroyed, or so thoroughly subdued as to insure our personal safety, but the question naturally arises, what of this invasion, and what will be the ultimate outcome of it?

For two years there has been a secret influence at work in this country looking forward to the annexation of Mexico. American capital has long looked upon the rich resources of Mexico with longing eyes. They feel that with annexation they would have comparatively a free hand and would be backed in their avaricious greed by the strong arm of the American government. But from the viewpoint of justice, have not these misguided people been trimmed as close to the bone by American capital as any Shylock could demand? Crush their unscrupulous leaders, but leave their inheritance alone.

Warren G. Harding, Hearst and many others have long favored annexation, and Mr. Harding is again out in a speech strongly demanding annexation. Why is this? Have we not had trouble enough with Mexico? There is no doubt but that many of the leaders of Mexico would sell their country for a price, but this Judas Escariot act would not avert at least a long guerrilla warfare, a vast expenditure of money and much loss of life and bloodshed.

However, these sure results do not for one moment deter a Harding or a Hearst, a Rockefeller or a Morgan. Their skins will not be perforated by a guerrilla bullet. They will make the inflammatory speeches, furnish the brass bands, make lots of noise, shed a few crocodile tears when a widow's son is brought home dead, possibly will place a 20-cent wreath of wilted flowers on his grave and have one of their well fed and well paid capitalist preachers on hand to tell the poor boy's surrounding comrades that he gave his life for the honor of his country and in order that big business may be perpetual and everlasting; that they, too, must fight like hell to gain a home in heaven.

The invasion of Mexico for our sinners and our homes, for our wives and children, we say fight and fight to a finish, but to fight for annexation that capital may coin your blood into dollars, we say never, never, never.

WEAK FROM GRIPPE

Home Missionary Tells How She Restored Her Health.

"I am a Home Missionary, was weak and run-down after a hard spell of LaGrippe. I had headaches, indigestion and pains in my chest, and was tired all the time. A friend asked me to try Vinol and the result is I am free from those troubles and I feel well and strong and able to go to work again." Mrs. Hattie Johnson, Towanda, Pa.

The reason Vinol was so successful in building up Mrs. Johnson's health is because it is a constitutional remedy which contains peptonate of iron to enrich and revitalize the blood, the nourishing properties of beef peptone and the healing medicinal extractives of fresh, healthy cod's livers, all combined in a delicious native tonic wine, without oil.

We wish every person in Maysville who is suffering from a weakened, run down, debilitated condition, would try our Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

WHITE PLAGUE

Continues Ravages in Kentucky—1,672 Persons Fall Victims To Tuberculosis During Year.

Frankfort, Ky.—The vital statistics preliminary report for 1915 showing the number of births and deaths for the state, counties and principal cities, the number of deaths in each from tuberculosis, and other preventable diseases, and from cancer and violence, has just been completed by the Kentucky Bureau of Vital Statistics and submitted by Dr. W. L. Heizer, state registrar.

There were registered during 1915, 63,478 births and 28,913 deaths, giving a birth rate per 100,000 population of 26.6 and a death rate of 12.1. In 1914 there were registered 61,135 births and 30,139 deaths. Of these deaths for 1915, 4,730 were of infants under 1 year of age, 2,242 were aged one to five, and 7,345 were 65 years of age and over.

Consumption (all forms) caused 4,692 fatalities, typhoid 704, diphtheria-croup 540, scarlet fever 46, measles 77, whoopingcough 187, pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia 2,385, diarrhoea-enteritis under 2 years (summer complaint of children) 842, dysentery (flux) in persons over 2 years of age 369, meningitis 379, lagrippe and puerperal septicaemia infections of child birth 130, cancer was responsible for 1,090 deaths and violence (all kinds) were 1,683.

There was a reduction of 1,226 in the total number of deaths registered in 1915 as compared with 1914, and an increase of 441 deaths from tuberculosis, 42 from diphtheria-croup, 125 from lagrippe, and there was a decrease of 290 from typhoid, 9 from scarlet fever, 189 from measles, 175 from whoopingcough, 203 from pneumonia, 600 from summer complaint of children, 117 from meningitis, 78 from infection of childbirth, and 371 from other diarrhoeal diseases of people over 2 years of age. The registered deaths from cancer and violence showed a decrease in 1915 from 1914 of 38 and 323 respectively.

Preventable disease deaths were responsible for 40 of each hundred fatalities in 1915 as compared with 42 for 1914.

The following tables give the total number of births and deaths registered in the eastern counties of the state for 1915. In a few counties and in parts of several, the death registration was not complete, and for this reason the state Board of Health has arranged to have an inspector investigate these violations of the law, and secure the arrest and conviction of those responsible for this neglect of duty.

Rev. P. Cameron of Olive Hill, and Rev. Isaac Canfield of Waltz, preached at the Baptist church near here last Sunday.

Charles H. Compton closed his school on Big Run last Friday with an old-time spelling match and a bit of candy.

We are always very much interested in the letter of your Park Lake and Wallingford correspondent and say to him "write often."

"Uncle" Kiah McDaniel, aged 92, of this place, is very low with grip and pneumonia and his life is despaired of. He also suffers with rheumatism.

John McDaniel of Nepton and brother Ulrich of Mayslick, were called here very recently on account of the sickness of their father, Kiah McDaniel, and his wife.

Mrs. Melvina McDaniel, aged 79 years, wife of Kiah McDaniel of this place, who is also desperately low with the grip, died and was buried here last Thursday after a long siege of grip and pneumonia. She was the mother of Squire J. H. Muse of this place. A good, kind, clever, and sociable Christian lady, well liked and respected by all who knew her. She had been down for some time and while everything was done that could be done for her, she was a patient sufferer and continued to grow worse until God relieved her suffering and called her home. We would say to her only son, J. H. Muse, and her many friends and relatives, to look up and not down, for God doeth all things well, and prepare to meet "Aunt" Nel, as she was familiarly known, just over the river where the angels dwell.

Hell county will vote on a $150,000 road bond issue May 13, the second in the last fourteen months. The first issue of $250,000 is not sufficient to put all the roads in the condition desired.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer D. Ellis were in Highgateport, O., Sunday attending the funeral of Mr. Ellis' uncle, Mr. Simon Druke.

IN BAD SHAPE

Lewis County's Roads Now In Worse Condition Than Ever, and Very Near All the Road Issue Money Frittered Away.

(Vanceburg Sun.)

It is with regret that we who favored and boosted the bond issue for the improvement of our Lewis county roads find it necessary to say to those who opposed the measure on the ground that the business would be mismanaged and the money frittered away with no visible result, have proven correct.

The report of the grand jury shows that the county officials have spent $109,000 of the $150,000 bond issue, and with the exception of one mile of road to the top of the Kinney Hill, which cost about three times as much as it should have cost, the roads are in worse condition today than they were when the work began, as they are all plover up, parts of the grading done, no part of them finished and very little hope that they ever will be.

The road up through Black Oak and Kinney bottom to the Greenup county line is partly graded and in an impossible condition for use, the lower river road to Concord is in the same shape, with a bridge to build over Syenmore creek that the engineer claims will cost $25,000.

The Salt Lick road to the valley has had more done on it than the others, but still lacks a great deal of work before it will be finished for use. It will cost as much money to finish any one of these roads as there is now left in the road fund not including the Syenmore bridge.

Evidence taken by the grand jury shows that these small culverts on the Concord road that contain in all about 120 cubic yards of concrete cost nearly $2,000, or about $41.50 per yard, as a result of this the grand jury returned indictment against Ed Rand, who built the culverts, for obtaining money under false pretenses, and against County Surveyor Ivan Sanders for knowingly certifying to false statement and incurring expenses, accounts that were not just.

Judge J. M. Lee was indicted for participating in a contract to build the Kinney road in violation of the law preventing county officials from being a party to a contract directly or indirectly.

LARGE HAMS

Two Sold At Mt. Olivet That Weighed 31 and 35 Pounds Respectively.

(Mt. Olivet Tribune-Democrat.)

John W. Neal, a well known farmer of Piqua pike, near town, brought to town two of the largest hams of meat that break the record for size. One weighed fifty-four pounds and one forty-eight pounds. He sold them to Mrs. E. M. Case at 15 cents per pound. Mr. Neal also sold one side out of this same porker that balanced the scales at sixty-eight pounds. He has in all, sold $35 worth of meat, the product of this one hog, and in addition to the sausage meat, has had seventeen gallons of lard. It has been no great many years ago that one could buy a large fat steer for $35.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Harbour were visitors at Cincinnati Saturday.
